GEPF self-service website and app

The Government Employees Pension Fund (GEPF) has launched a self-service web system and app to enable its members to access and update their information as well as track pension or other related benefit claims.

This system will minimise long queues at GEPF offices and call centres, as well as travelling long distances to access the services.

On the GEPF self-service system members can:

- access latest benefit statements;
- trace resignation and retirement benefit claims. However, on the next phase, GEPF members will be able to track all benefit claims such as child's pension benefit, spouse pension benefit, death benefit, funeral benefit and divorce claim benefit;
- update personal information such as address and contact details. (For security reasons, members updating personal information such as changing surname and marital status will still need to do so manually by completing the Z864 form for updating personal information. Once the form is completed, a member needs to submit it to the nearest GEPF office with supporting documents so that the details can be updated on GEPF self-service platforms);
- nominate and update beneficiaries;
- access personalised communication such as letters and newsletters;
- access latest notices about GEPF services, processes and benefits;

- view banking details that GEPF has on its system. (For security reasons, members updating banking details will still need to do so manually by completing the Z894 banking particulars form. Once the form is completed, a member needs to submit it to the nearest GEPF office with supporting documents so that the details can be updated on GEPF self-service platforms); and
- request a "Please Call Me Back" if they're experiencing technical issues or need assistance with information on the platform.
